

Real Estate Investment Trusts Hedge the Stock and Bond Markets in Denver, Colorado

REITbuyer online service for learning about REITs and how to invest in them is designed for new and seasoned investors

Denver, CO –Many investors looking at their investment portfolio today notice that it is filled with the normal stock and bond investments; they may have noticed that there has been a lot of damage to those investments in the past year or so. With the credit crunch and the market crash, most investments are half, or less, of what they should be.

This is the reason the REITbuyer.com site was designed. The site is an educational resource for investors to learn about real estate stocks; how to research them and how to invest wisely.

REITs are Real Estate Investment Trusts. These are investments that fund a real estate management company. There are a variety of REITs available, including those that invest in real estate developers' constructions ventures or those who manage income-producing real estate such as apartment complexes or commercial building leases.

Louis J. Glickman said it best when he said, "The best investment on earth is earth." Real estate is always a wise investment. No matter what happens the land will always be there.

Earl E. Bird, III, spokesperson for the REITbuyer is confident that REITs will always provide a positive return. "REITs offer more diversity and security for one's investment portfolio," said Bird. Read more about investing in REITs at <http://americanconference.blogspot.com>
