

REIT Buyers in Minneapolis Lead the Real Estate Investing Pack

In the world of investing there are two kinds of people, those who make money and see a profit and those that don't; everyone wants to be a part of the first group

Minneapolis, MN – Those who do well in investing understand the importance of research and education. Earl E. Bird, III is an authority in REITs, Real Estate Investment Trusts and Real Estate Mutual Funds. Earl said, “Take a few lessons from the big dogs; after all, they got to where they are through years of hard work and wise investing.”

“Look at Donald Trump!” Earl exclaimed, “His whole career was made on the right real estate moves at the right time. Another thing to consider is that real estate is an asset, instead of a more fluid commodity that could disappear overnight.”

Earl understands that many people are accustomed to the more traditional types of investments; they are not really sure where to start when it comes to investing in real estate stock. Earl said, “With REITs you can be a part of a fund or have something as liquid as a stock, rather than be stuck in a situation where you are forced to deal with all the contracts and deeds of property as well as the maintenance of it.”

Earl explained REITs by comparing them to real estate mutual funds, “When you purchase shares in REITs you are putting money into the pot for the real estate management group or real estate development group to build or purchase real estate with and then manage it and keep it operational.”

As the meeting concluded, Earl made a final statement, “Profits are derived through the money the management group makes annually from rent in residential properties and leases of business properties. 90 percent of the profits from REIT investments must go back to the shareholders in the form of dividends each year.” Read articles written by Earl Bird at
