

Online Stock Traders Beef up Portfolios with Real Estate Investment Trusts

Investors looking for long-term increases on investments choose REITs

Detroit, MI – REITs are real estate investment trusts, also known as real estate mutual funds. Earl Bird, real estate investor, was recently invited to speak at a local Real Estate Investors Association meeting. He explained how REITs work and how to invest in them. Earl said, “In many cases investors purchase REITs then sit back as the monthly dividend checks come in. As they purchase more shares the amount of the dividends increase.”

Earl explained how investors prefer REITs over other mutual funds because for the most part they are long-term investment options that are strong and stable. Since they are based on real estate holdings and property always has value, they are a wise investment choice.

Even in the short term, REITs are a nice way to see a little money grow in your account from month to month. In the long term it could mean a lot of money for one’s retirement.

Earl said, “Many people are steering away from the stock market and mutual funds as their investments are losing value. Smart people will beef up their portfolio by investing in REITs, as they are steadily growing. Building your retirement nest egg will not happen over night, but if you get started now, you will see significant growth by the time you need it the most.”

Investors who have never worked with REITs before can get the basic education on what they are and how they work at REITbuyer.com, information and trading website. Besides being a site to buy and sell your REITs, it is also a place to track your investments and your portfolio.

Real estate investors can learn about REITs at the REITBuyer.com.
