The online REIT Information Source is fully operational; the beta testing is complete

Detroit, MI – Earl E Bird, III has recently announced that the REITbuyer.com website is completely operational. “We are very excited to have worked the bugs out and completed the beta testing,” said Earl in a recent interview. “We realize many people have visited the site and noticed ‘coming soon’ attached to areas of interest. We promoted the site before it was fully operational because there was a lot of educational material posted for people to learn more about REITs.”

Earl explained, “REITs are real estate investment trusts, corporations that primarily own and usually operate real estate that generates revenue including hotels, commercial office buildings, rental homes and apartment complexes to name a few. REITs may also finance real estate and many have their shares traded on major stock exchanges.”

When asked about the site, Earl said, “REITBuyer.com is a one stop shop for real estate investing opportunities, whether you are a savvy investment guru looking for the latest information or a new investor in need of guidance. We have secured agreements with the leading real estate mutual funds and REITs and we have made them readily accessible through a convenient, all-electronic investing platform.”

Earl discussed the investment possibilities, “Invest toward early retirement, your child’s education, a new home or business, or any goal you choose. Our unique online ‘Assessment Wizard’ assists investors in choosing an account type and investment that is suitable for their specific needs. We have professional money managers who oversee investments on our clients’ behalf.”
